

Click here to bookmark Savista Magazine

Issue: November 2012

Contact Login Register

Search this site...

FIND OUT MORE > The Stannah Promise Always true to our word Stannah

Home News Finance & Jobs Food & Drink Health Home & Garden Lifestyle Motoring Travel Products

Travel archive Travel St Petersburg: Not an Average Holiday Directory Back to November 2012

« Previous Article: VW Golf Cabriolet in Motoring

Next article: Chase the Sun in St Lucia in Travel »

St Petersburg: Not an Average Holiday

by Olivia Greenway

Considering that you can now visit Russia without a visa by travelling overnight on the St Peter Line ferry from Helsinki, Olivia Greenway guides us to the best places to visit for a brief stay (you are allowed 72 hours, or two nights in the country!).

HIGH QUALITY JACKETS & COATS

OUTDOOR CLOTHING

Olivia Greenway

The ferry sails in the evening. After an enjoyable supper (buffet style, including wine for €25), a trip to the duty free allows you to buy potent vodka at bargain prices. Prices in the bar are reasonable too for a quick drink before bed. The cabins are basic but clean; let the gentle rocking of the boat send you to a peaceful sleep. When you wake up, you're in Russia. An obligatory drive from the ferry to the town centre (and back again later) costs around €25. You may also like to avail yourself of a guided four-hour city tour.

As soon as you hit the main street of Nevsky Prospekt, it feels foreign and rather exotic, but it's the most European of all the streets. It's winter and although it's 11am in the morning, the streetlights are still on and it's dark. The street names are in the Cyrillic alphabet and reading maps is difficult. The familiar onion domed churches from your fairy tale books are now a reality. Young women are tall and look severe and slightly old-fashioned and many wear full-length fur coats. A group of soldiers, wearing long grey greatcoats, stand

Nevsky Prospekt at 11am

travel insurance from Savista Magazine
Get a quote

Related articles

around in a huddle, stamping their stout black boots on the ground to keep warm. This place has a definite Eastern European feel.

Over 300 bridges criss-cross the canals and river, earning it the moniker “Venice of the North”. There are also 200 churches, the same number of museums and 42 islands. So it’s a large city (population just under 5 million) with a lot to take in on a short visit; you need to select the activities that interest you.

The spectacular Hermitage

The Hermitage is probably worth a trip to St Petersburg on its own. Really a series of interconnecting historic buildings, it is the former Winter Palace of Catherine the Great. It’s quite a performance to get in; there are usually long queues and you have to pay extra to take your camera (no flash allowed). If you can, organise an official tour (perhaps through your hotel concierge), which will short-circuit all these problems. With over 3 million items in the collection, it can also be a bit overwhelming, so a tour guide will take you to the greats – for example Renoir, Goya, Degas and Picasso - and many more you might have struggled to find on your own. In winter, the queues are shorter and the museum is not so busy; so if you really want to enjoy The Hermitage, take my tip and visit in the winter. The entrance fee is modest.

Inside the Hermitage

Captain Scott: Undone by an Empire?

Seaside Vintage:
Cockles and Muscles

National Portrait
Gallery, London

Chase the Sun in St
Lucia

A Flick Back in Time

November 2012 in Travel

- The Isles of Scilly
- A Little Slice of England
- Get Cultured In Cologne
- Indulge in the Lake District

Visiting all the churches is not possible, but if you want to select just two, the Russian Orthodox Cathedral of St Isaacs takes some beating. Its sheer size and the extravagance of the decoration inside - tall white marble pillars rising heavenwards; gilded life-size angels and cherubs, the yellowy reflected light from these and all the flickering candles –is impressive. There will probably be a whiff of incense in the air and if you are lucky, you may hear choral voices. This is a working church and well used by the residents, especially at Christmas and Easter. The grimly titled Church of the Saviour of the Spilled Blood is where Alexander 11 was assassinated in 1881 and has the familiar onion domes.

The Church of Saviour of Spilled Blood

Having a cup of hot chocolate in one of St Petersburg's oldest hotels for a spot of historical nostalgia and people watching is also recommended. The Grand Hotel Europe has been visited by Bill Clinton, Jane Fonda and even HM the Queen. You may not spot a celebrity but should see a few women flaunting exquisite jewellery and expensive furs.

Ice sculpture in the Grand Hotel Europe

The Sokos Finnish hotel chain has three four star hotels in St Petersburg – I had lunch in the one near The Hermitage at Palace Bridge. A buffet style meal with excellent traditional stroganoff may be enjoyed from midday in this cleverly converted former warehouse. However, there are other hotels to suit all budgets, from basic to grandiose.

If you enjoy opera and ballet then no visit would be complete without trying to see a performance at the world class Mariinsky Theatre. Tickets won't be cheap but they will not be as expensive as visiting the opera or ballet in London and you may be able to see a performance that is unique to Russia.

The grand interior of the Hermitage

Iron Horseman at St Isaacs Cathedral

The summer is extremely busy with both domestic and foreign tourists, especially for the White Nights – two weeks in about the middle of June when the sun sets for just a brief period. All sorts of concerts, festivals and parties are held that go on late into the night. Book early to secure accommodation.

A winter visit will see the city almost empty. You just need to wrap up, bring sensible shoes for the icy streets and be cheered by the much lower hotel rates.

« Previous article: VW Golf Cabriolet in Motoring

Next article: Chase the Sun in St Lucia in Travel »

You are not logged in. Register or login have your comments appear more quickly! Registering is free and easy.

Post a comment

To help prevent spam please enter the letters from image below:

qfbz

Comments

Be the first to comment.

---

Savista Magazine is a quality online lifestyle magazine for the over 50s. The team at Savista are dedicated to bringing articles and features on lifestyle, hobbies and interests of over 50s life together in one place, that is easy and enjoyable to read. We aim to entertain, not patronise, as we believe that 'over 50' does not mean 'over the hill' – instead it can be the perfect time in life to realise your goals and ambitions. Savista Magazine is a joint project of Mostly Property and Stannah.

Advertise with us | Privacy | Contact us

© Copyright 2012 Savista Magazine. Savista Magazine is owned by Mostly Property Ltd

Web design and build by Open Door Internet